Aaron Silbert is an experienced Executive Recruiter, who is a Partner and Operations Leader at Relate Search, specializing in Human Resources and Supply Chain Operations talent and taking a leading role in Sales Operations for the company.

He takes pride in providing valuable services to his clients, helping them identify and secure exceptional talent for their teams. Aaron also goes above and beyond to support his candidates, guiding them through the recruitment process and assisting them in achieving their career goals. He also loves the operational side of the business, using his background in training and sales enablement to help both the company and the people that work there work efficiently and exceed their financial targets.

Aaron brings authenticity to work every single day, fostering trust and building strong connections with everyone he works with. Throughout his career, Aaron has learned that relationships are the foundation of success. He believes that building genuine connections and investing effort into nurturing them are essential for personal and professional growth.

Aaron's best traits are his work ethic, passion, gritty mindset, and unwavering determination. He believes that staying true to oneself and finding a genuine fit in business, industry, and company are key to accomplishing your professional goals.

Deeply passionate about mental health causes, Aaron advocates for raising awareness and support in this area and erase the stigma around mental illness. He also is a 10+ year veteran of Cycle for Survival, which raises money for Memorial Sloan Kettering in support of rare cancer research.

Aaron's graduated with a bachelor's degree from the University of Connecticut. Outside the office, he loves rooting for his favorite NYC area sports teams, as well as his alma mater, UConn. In his free time, he spends time down the Jersey Shore and travels the world with his loving spouse, Nikki.
